CHAMPION WHAT MATTERS

A MESSAGE FROM DEAN ROGER FAIRFAX

At American University Washington College of Law, we are a community of accomplished faculty, engaged administrators, exceptional students, and extraordinary alumni leaders who continue our 126 year tradition of excellence in legal education, skills-based teaching, and relevant, high-impact scholarship.

The spirit of our tradition lies in the hearts and minds of our community members, who are dedicated to the professional advancement and well-being of our students, and who strive to “Champion What Matters,” locally, nationally, and internationally.

Founded by pioneering women in 1896, a time when few women had the opportunity to attend professional schools, we have continued to build upon a tradition of inclusive excellence. Our law school now features top programs in clinical legal education, public interest, international law, trial advocacy, health law, intellectual property, law and government, and much more. With our location one block from the Metro Red Line in Northwest Washington, D.C., our students are connected more than ever to all that the nation’s capital has to offer.

Our faculty and administration form a community of caring leaders who utilize their diverse experience and vision in service of the professional aspirations of our students. We take great pride in having exceptionally dedicated faculty whose experience, impact, and contributions touch every area of the law.

So, too, our nearly 20,000 alumni have made extraordinary achievements in all areas of private law, business, and consulting, as well as government service, public interest, academia, and humanitarian work around the world.

As Dean of American University Washington College of Law, I am committed to the advancement of our tradition of excellence. It is my pleasure to invite you to visit our campus and experience for yourself our exceptional community.

Sincerely,

Roger A. Fairfax, Jr.
Dean and Professor of Law

THE D.C. EXPERIENCE

We see the nation's capital as another classroom. Washington, D.C. is one of the most dynamic and diverse cities in the world—home to branches of government, the U.S. Supreme Court, international organizations, major law firms, and multinational corporations. The city also boasts world-class restaurants, unrivaled museums and venues, and wonderfully diverse neighborhoods. You can find a place that fits your lifestyle that's an easy commute to our law campus.

BEYOND THE CLASSROOM

Among the many advantages of studying law in Washington, D.C., is the opportunity to integrate practical experience with the theory of the classroom. Our Externship Program provides students the opportunity to receive academic credit for substantive legal work and reflect on their experience through seminars conducted by a broad cross-section of AUWCL full-time and adjunct faculty. Each year, more than 300 students gain practical, hands-on legal experience with government agencies, public interest organizations, courts, and law firms engaged in pro bono work.

The program hosts specialized fairs for upper-level students to connect them with employers focused on particular practice areas such as business, finance, health, public interest, non-profit, intellectual property, criminal law, immigration, and labor and employment law. The program's largest event is hosted spring semester for first- and second-year students, and is attended by more than 150 organizations recruiting externs for summer and academic year placements.

Our students have recently externed at:

- American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU)
- Children's Law Center
- Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA)
- Maryland Office of the Public Defender
- Montgomery County State's Attorney's Office
- The World Bank
- United States Department of Justice
- United States Patent and Trademark Office
- United States District Court for the District of Columbia
